12. Harassment of Council Staff and Councillors

To discuss the recent harassment of council staff and councillors, oppressive correspondence, homophobic abuse, and unfounded accusations.

To consider actions taken by another authority (as detailed below) to protect staff and councillors, and agree a course of action that is appropriate.

In a recent case Ashford Borough Council and Kerly v Fergus Wilson (2021) EWHC 2542 (QB), the Council sought a final anti-harassment injunction to protect staff, councillors, and agents from a campaign of harassment and intimidation from the defendant. In July 2020, the High Court granted an interim injunction restraining the defendant from pursuing a course of conduct amounting to harassment under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997. Between February 2016 and July 2020, the Council's legal department recorded 454 pieces of correspondence from the defendant. The High Court judge found among other things that the defendant had engaged in a campaign of repetitive, frequent, oppressive, and offensive correspondence with the claimants, which ignored reasoned responses from the Council. The defendant's correspondence included two suggestions that a councillor should commit suicide, numerous examples of personally offensive comments about appearance, unfounded accusations of criminal conduct and professional misconduct and requests that councillors or employees should resign or be dismissed. In the circumstances the judge was satisfied that the interim injunction should be continued and converted to a permanent injunction.
